

Learn more about the Hippos

The hippos of Glenrothes have become a crucial part of the Glenrothes community, with multiple variations of the sculptures across the town. The hippos were first introduced in 1972, created by artists: Stanley Bonnar and David Harding. Harding said the decision to make the hippos was: 'because of its rounded form and the opportunity to create humorous and surreal situations.'

Every year, local schools in the area hold an annual Hippo Parade! Each school creates their own decorated hippo, and together the schools parade around Glenrothes!

When you're finished, cut out your hippos and take your parade on a new adventure!
